History:

There is some uncertainty about the exact location of this old burial plot: Quoting from Mr. Johnson's "History of Cooper County, Mo.," Shadrack MORRIS was born in Kentucky, a son of Hammond Morris, a Virginian, who came West in the early days (about 1818). (He is listed in the McCulloch Cemetery.) Shadrack came west; being the only one of ten children in his father's family thus to emigrate. He spent his last days in the county and was buried on what is now (1919) the John Bear Farm." No mention is made of where his wife was buried.

The following markers for person whom we presume were also buried at that same plot have been located around the residence of the old Ol Groves farm; a short distance from what was the Bears' place. There also was a family connection here. Mrs. Groves having been a Bear before her marriage; sometime, we can't learn when; this old burial plot was destroyed and the markers carried up to this residence.

At present, this is the residence of Mr. And Mrs. Walter Shirk. The stones are in the yard here and in good condition. Information given in red is from the Cooper County Record of Deaths
